«Rochester, N. Y.» The writer thanks the Boston Female Anti-Slavery Society for their invitation "to labor in Boston and vicinity for a few months." Enumerates reasons why he cannot accept; the writer is the only agent for the state of New York; his acquaintance in this state gives him advantages which he would lack in Massachusetts; he is pledged to labor in New York state during the present season; he is a "Backwoodsman untamed" whose "bearish proportions have never been licked into city shape." Recommends to the Boston Female Anti-Slavery Society two such societies of Ohio counties and one of Pittsburg, Pa. for "sisterly fellowship."

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Rochester, n.Y.» In Western New York "the great body of honest-hearted abolitionists" are connected with the Liberty Party. Its leaders, such as Gerrit Smith and William Goodell, "are sound on the Church question." Suggests that if the Constitutional question could be thoroughly discussed in Western New York, many converts would be won for the doctrine of "No union with slaveholders!" The circulation of the Liberator would be more effective than that of the Standard, which is not "very well adapted to our latitude." Tells of a proposition to support Frederick Douglass as a lecturing agent.

«Rochester, (N.Y.)» Arrived at Rochester last night and was met by «Isaac» Post, and Aaron M. Powell. Was driven to Susan B. Anthony's country residence. Powell has been here seven weeks, preaching in the Unitarian church. W.L.G.'s lecture in Cleveland was "almost a failure,"-only 150 were present. There is continuous rain or mild and foggy weather. A. E. Newton, editor of the New England Spiritualist, was in W.L.G.'s audience. Today Ira Stout is to be executed for murder. "Ruffianism" in the city clamors for the hanging. W.L.G. will dine with S. J. May on the way to Cortland and return to Syracuse to lecture.

«Seneca Falls, N.Y.» The writer considers the addressee "a most terribly severe disciplinarian" in reference to George Bradburn and James N. Buffum. Suggests that tho addressee write to the latter as a friend and make clear to him "that «Gerrit» Smith by endorsing New Organization is inflicting as deep an injury as St.Clair or Torrey..." The writer asserts that "some people you cannot drive from the cause, S.S.Foster, for instance." Collins remains in Central New York, Jacob Ferris, George Bradburn and Frederick Douglass are now in Ohio. Collins urged the writer to accompany them, but her judgment forbade it. Thinks that the campaign will be more useful without Collins; gives reasons. [illegible]s that Collins is "wrapped in another idea" and that the agents connected with him chafe meeting could not be set aside for anti-slavery — Collins became angry and they became angry — Both said what they would not in cool blood —" Thinks that Remond and Douglass should not "have their pay stopped," and that Collins was not fit for the work to which he was appointed. James S. Gibbons, in a letter received, justifies himself in keeping the Executive Chair(of the American A.S. Society). The writer, believing the society moribund, wants the addressee to take charge of it. Samuel J. May and John Pierpont are to lecture here on abolition. "The place is now lashed with perfect fury. I got up a storm and Foster increased it to a tempest."

[North Shore, Staten Island] The writer is "dreadfully concerned about the result of the proposition to the English government from the W I [West Indian] planters, to bring colored laborers from Africa." France is about to do this; if England does the same, the writer would "fall down in despair." Asks what the addressee thinks of a petition from the American Anti-Slavery Society to the English government, "setting forth the fearful consequence to the Anti-Slavery cause here, & the anxiety we feel upon the subject & praying them to resist the wicked plan ..." The writer thinks that "such miserable half & half, hypocritical papers as the 'N.Y. Times' & 'Boston Traveller' [illegible] doing all they can to help the bad."

.Syracuse (N.Y.). Praises hospitality in this section. Left Waterloo for Syracuse with Collins. Entertained at splendid mansion of Stephen Smith and Wing Russell. Collins ill there. Convention opened with only eleven present in morning. Crowded in evening. G. made stir with heresies. Next day, S.S. Foster, accusing Methodist Church, caused riot. Another day Foster gained respectful audience and was followed by lawyers Hiram Cummings and D.D. Hillis as opponents. Town in ferment, but tide "turning in our favor." Wishes Foster would use more discretion. Will lecture in Albany. Has influenza. Believes in animal magnetism.

«Syracuse, N.Y.» Reports informally on the "upper series" conventions, which were "confusion worse confounded." None of the agents will work with John A. Collins. On Sunday last, when the A. S. Convention was scheduled to begin in Syracuse, only Frederick Douglass appeared. "Where is Collins, the general agent that he does not keep the wheels in motion? He is in Utica at the 'association meeting.'" George Bradburn is visiting Gerrit Smith and attending his meetings,"thinking he could without violation of principle accept pay from the Liberty Party as G. Smith offered it to me." Collins is coming Monday "with his anti-pro[illegible] coadjutors." The writer questions if the Board has a r[illegible]o employ a man with Collins's preoccupations: he cannot talk to the A. S. conventions, as his soul is not in them. Writes sarcastically of his persistence in holding "property meetings" in various places. The writer protests that she is not prejudiced, but admires Collins as a man; however, affairs are shockingly mismanaged. Sidney Howard Gay has just joined Bradburn and Douglass. Tells of friction between Collins and C.L. Remond.

[Syracuse, N.Y.] Writes for her husband (John A. Collins) who cannot do so because of the inflammation in his side. He is obliged to keep perfectly quiet and has not spoken in public for two weeks. Remarks on the "assault made upon Mr. Collins by Remond & Douglass in a public meeting in this place. It was most ungenerous, inducing the people to believe him false to the trust reposed in him by the Mass. friends..." The indident has confirmed Mr. Collins in the opinion that "he cannot longer continue in the agency."

«Syracuse, N.Y.» The writer is waiting for the Liberty Bell, which he wants to present to his friend George B. Emerson. Can dispose of a half dozen copies of the Liberty Bell. It is sad "to feel oneself so far away from Boston." Lists the Abolitionists assembled to consider the Report of the Board of C. F. Missions. The address, prepared by Amos A. «Syracuse» The writer wishes to bring the anti-slavery cause before the German population of the country. Though supporting his family by teaching music, the writer preaches every sabbath in a hired hall at a salary of about $75 a year. Asks the abolitionists to help him with $300 to erect a meeting-house. In return the writer would be willing "to translate or to write a year for the Abolition society gratis." Or the society might pay him for such work and he might try to build a meeting-house on that basis.

«Syracuse,. (N.Y.)» Three or four hundred assembled at his lecture last evening, in spite of the pending election. The majority were ladies. W.L.G. spoke on the religious aspect of the A-S cause. The first ice of the season has formed, but the sun is bright. Expects a small audience in Albany, "a corrupt and selfish place." Tried to dissuade Lydia Mott from attempting a meeting. His success in Syracuse was due to S. J. May's influence and propoganda. Hopes to be at home in a week. May will stop in Boston. «Syracuse, (N.Y.)» Arrived in Syracuse in a severe rainstorm. "Mr. Wise, of Auburn, accompanied me as far as Albany ..." Waited for S. J. May, who didn't come, so he finally hired a hack and was driven to S. J. M.'s home. "... was in a state of physical collapse, and my spirits quite flabby-dabby." Gives news of the May family. Decided not lecture at Erie, Pa. Complains of high prices in Pittsfield, Mass. "My travelling expenses will undoubtedly make a considerable hole in my receipts."

«Syracuse, (N.Y.)» "I am always conscious of speaking less fluently, and less satisfactorily to myself, when I am speaking for pay than when I am not." Tells the addressee that she has endured her physical handicaps "with admirable resignation and patience." Suggests a possible further trial of Dr. Dow's shock treatment. Talks about his finances. Regrets that he cannot give Fanny more money for her wedding. "Fortunately, Harry is abundantly able to provide for her as a wife ..." Gives instructions about the Liberator. Thinks that C. K. Whipple may not find it convenient to supervise its operations.

«Syracuse, N.Y.» Concerned with the republication, in a volume, of the writer's "Anti Slavery Recollections" originally printed in the Christian Register. The writer wishes the addressee's help in correcting errors and making additions. The writer has repeatedly told his readers that he was "only attempting to give sketches - not a complete history of the anti-slavery conflict." Requests the addressee to revive his recollections of Nathaniel P. Rogers. Also asks about the name of the New Hampshire lawyer "who went to New Orleans to settle the estate of a deceased brother - found it insolvent - and was obliged to allow his brother's daughters and their mother to be sold as part o[illegible] assets."

To "a Colored Man an Exile"

:Utica, (N.Y.): A reply to an anonymous letter. "You regret that I advocate the cause of the Colonization Society ..." G. W. B. admits that he has never been a slave or a slaveholder. Pity for the slave caused him to become a colonizationist. Does not favor enforced emigration to Liberia. The Colonization Society never had the means to send more than a few slaves to Liberia. It wanted to give the slave an opportunity to develop his capabilities and the benevolent slaveholder a chance "to free and place his slave where he can enjoy his liberty ..." G. W. B. would prefer to die a free man in Liberia than to live as [illegible]lave in the U.S. Denies that the colonizationists hate [illegible]olored people. Names several white men who have devoted their lives to helping the negroes.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

[West Winfield, N.Y.] Alluding to a letter from the addressee in which the writer was apparently asked to define her position, she declares: "My life is a constant definition." Enough abuse of the writer will be seen in the next Liberty Press to satisfy the most doubtful. Refers to a convention in Winfield. There are hundreds of recent converts, not yet thoroughly indoctrinated, whom the writer holds in her hand. A one-day meeting was held at Canastata previous to the State Nominating Convention. Comments on the Wesleyans and their attitude toward the "infidel Garrisonians." About $130 were raised, "and the triumph over the New-organizers was quite delightful." Tells how "the muck worms [Willia[illegible]rence] Chaplin & [James Caleb] Jackson crawled into the co[illegible]tion. Their solemnity was broken into by that crazy [Stephen S.] Foster..." thinks Foster may "crush New Organization and save the true abolitionists of the party..." Recounts the appeals for cooperation made to the opponents: "But our tears were all in vain...«Alvan» Stewart declared it necessary to go to the ballot box in order to be an abolitionist and J.C. Jackson would not work in a society with nonresistants." The opposing party withdrew to a schoolhouse, where they had "as large a number as ourselves." Asks the addressee "never again to suspect me of being under the influence of such reptiles as Jackson and Co." The writer wants Foster to stay in the central part of the state. Asks the addressee to train James Monroe. "Between you and I[illegible]s, that Western «State» Society is merely a name and th[illegible]ntral Society would be were I not here". Criticizes David L. Child in the Standard.

«Raleigh, N. C.» The writer explains his delay in answering the addressee's letter concerning the mulatto woman, Mary Smith. As the case belongs to the judicial tribunals of the state, the writer could only endeavor to procure information for the addressee to be used "in the legal forums of the state" to obtain the woman's release. Transmits information gained from an acquaintance about the movements of Mary Smith and her arrest by Captain Pike, "who is an acting Magistrate." Dwells on the moral character and good reputation of Captain Pike and his attempt to secure information from Boston about Mary Smith. Captain Pike wi[illegible]nd the woman to Boston.

To "My dear friend" [Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman]

[Brunswick, Medina Co., (O.)] The writer reminds the addressee of the trials of 1839, '40-'41 in Massachusetts: "we are living these trials over again in Ohio today." They (the writer and her husband, Stephen S. Foster) have concentrated on obtaining enough subscriptions for the Bugle to insure its support. "Considering it is just before the biennial election ... I am astonished at our success...hundreds are coming into the disunion ranks on principle..." Nevertheless, the third party vote may be larger here than ever before. The writer feels confident it will be safe to leave in October. Where to go next — Western New York, [illegible] Massachusetts? Suggests "flooding the [Mass.] Legislature [illegible] remonstrances against the Union."

«Cincinnati, Ohio» Because of the high respect that the writer has for the addressee's opinions, she is consulting her in a private matter. About a month ago, the writer and her brother were appointed respectively instructress in needle work and professor of mathematics in Bellevue Female Seminary. The brother received, a week ago, a written notice that his services were no longer wanted, "his style of dress being unsuited to his position." The writer has resigned her position also, feeling sure that the matter of dress was merely a pretext and that he was being persecuted for his opinions. The seminary is frequented by pupils from the South.

«Springs Garden, Ohio» The writer says the Abolitionists in her neighborhood are either Christian Abolitionists or favor the Liberty party. Mentions the Philanthropist and its successor, the National Era. Seven years ago the Sewing Circle was organized to help the fugitive slaves. The writer wants to organize a Garrisonian society in Cincinnati. Would rather do this than work with the Salem group. Wants the constitution of the American Anti-Slavery Society. Says that many Sewing Circle members fear to join a Garrisonian society because of the churches. "The cholera although not as bad as last year is very fatal ... and [illegible] intense this summer than I have ever known ..." Menti[illegible]. Douglass's visit and praises him. Bradburn, George, 1806-1880 — Ms.A.9.2 Vol.19 No.18

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Cleveland, Ohio» The writer left John A. Collins at Syracuse and Frederick Douglass at Buffalo, both on the sick-list. Fears that Collins is seriously ill; received a letter from Collins' wife telling that the doctor had ordered him to speak no more for at least three months. Collins has spoken little at anti-slavery conventions, but more in his "property conventions." The writer doubts the value of such conventions for abolition. Believes that a single individual might have accomplished more than "the whole of us." Many friends of the cause have expressed the same idea. The best convention was at Rochester; describes a Sunday meeting be[illegible] an audience of some 4000. Friends wanted more meeting[illegible]re, but the writer was obliged to go to Buffalo, where he wasted three days for want of hearers. The writer found Jacob Ferris quite disheartened, for most of the abolitionists of Cleveland are third party men or Millerites. The writer deplores Collins's poor health and his absorption in "property operations." Remond and Douglass "blew him up" in a property meeting at Syracuse. The Whigs would not suffer Joshua Reed Giddings to be heard in Cleveland. The writer spent a day with Gerrit Smith at Peterborough and accompanied him to a Sabbath abolition meeting. "Gerrit collects thousands to hear him..." G. Smith urged the writer to spend two months in his county, and offered him liberal compensation for his services. A similar offe[illegible]as made to Abby Kelley, who thought it an attempt to br[illegible]er "and wrote Smith an excoriating letter." Charles T. T[illegible]y disclaimed having opposed women's rights. The writer has declared publicly that he would sooner vote for the devil than for such a man as Alvan Stuart.

Tells of travelling on the new Erie railway "300 miles in 12 hours - such speed when I was young would not be dreamt of - it only belonged to our poet Darwin's poetical imagination who wrote upon the power of steam that it would do away the use of horses in some future time." The writer contrasts the Yankee farmers with those in Ireland. Spent a pleasant day with "that extraordinary & excellent old man Isaac T«atem» Hopper", with whose character she became acquainted through Lydia Maria Child's letters from New York. «Green Plain, Ohio» Reply to the addressee's letter which accuses the writer of bad faith toward the American and Massachusetts A.S. Societies in his conduct "in relation to the Liberty Party." If the Mass. Board, to whom alone he holds himself responsible, had written him such a letter, the writer would have "denounced the Board as a band of mean-spirited knaves." Explains that with one exception - a sharp rebuke to Alvan Stewart for his letter to the Liberty Press - the writer's course, in respect to the Liberty Party, has been the same throughout: he has nothing to say either for or against it, does not consider it h[illegible]ty to damn the characters of its members, or to denounc[illegible] Party. As the addressee deems his course wrong and feels herself responsible, the writer suggests three ways by which she can relieve herself of the

	To Rev. Samuel May Jr.	No.87

«Jefferson, Ashtabula Co., Ohio» The writer says Parker Pillsbury "utterly repudiated the present system of marriage." Quotes from an article on Women's Rights by P. Complains of P.'s lack of modesty on one occasion. Says that some of the "liberal" Abolitionists were favoring a theory of "Individual Sovereignty" which closely resembled the Free Love doctrine. Says it caused his wife to divorce him. She became P.'s travelling companion. The writer says that some of his Anti-Slavery friends had told him that P. was a free lover. Denies rumors that he has been intemperate.

[Oakland, Clinton Co., Ohio] A large share of the labor of the conventions has fallen upon the writer, who has spoken in Ohio on an average of three hours each day. George Bradburn showed the writer a letter "in which you animadvert with some severity upon his course in relation to the 'Liberty Party.'" Thinks that the writer is mistaken in regard to Bradburn's course. The writer himself publicly exhorts all men to vote for noone unless he is a true abolitionist, his non-resistant views allowing him to go no further. Does not think that Charles (L.Remond) and Frederick (Douglass) "are excusable for deserting us so long, altho[illegible]e have got along very well without them." In New York [illegible]hio the writer has repeatedly been solicited to quit the conventions and labor for some state organization, but he considered the business of the

This is the third day of the annual meeting here, which has drawn "immense multitudes." The writer counted 470 horses standing around Liberty Hall the first day. Here there is need of a number of speakers. Almost all friends, except (S.S.) Foster and the writer, have been suffering from bronchitis. Remarks on the absence of Douglass and Remond; think[illegible]y may as well not rejoin the speakers, as in some of th[illegible]ces they are to visit"neither of them would be suffered to speak." «Oakland, Ohio» Frederick Douglass is lecturing "most ably and successfully" to large audiences. The writer repeats information received in a letter from a friend, Augustus Wattles, about the rupture that occurred at the annual meeting at Jonesboro, Indiana. Accordingly, Douglass interrupted George Bradburn, who claimed parliamentary right to continue his speech. Douglass appealed to the Chair, Daniel Worth, who decided in favor of Bradburn. Charles L. Remond called the chairman a jackass and appealed to the meeting, which sustained the Chair. Remond remarked: "they must be a set of monkeys out here in the We[illegible] James Monroe was called, but would not speak at that m[illegible]g. by others..." The writer is pained to observe a want of harmony among the Eastern friends. Suggests that the plan of calling conventions with several antislavery speakers scheduled is a bad one. The antislavery reform is but partial reform. "The circumstances which continually surround our speakers are calculated to foster self-esteem..." Proposes that suitable new agents be appointed and those now engaged be gradually withdrawn. An Eastern friend to whom the writer suggested Abby Kelley as general agent "seemed to have something of a horror of the gyneocracy which would be constituted by having Miss Kelley in th[illegible]eld and Mrs. Chapman in the council."

«Oakland, Ohio» Frederick Douglass has given his own version of the incident which the writer reported in a previous letter from information received from Augustus Wattles. According to Douglass, George Bradburn, after offering a resolution, consumed the afternoon in answering a list of objections. The next morning the chairman, after reading the resolution, said that Bradburn was entitled to the floor. Douglass disputed this because Bradburn was not going to speak to the resolution. The chairman upheld Bradburn, whereupon Remond appealed to the meeting, which sustained the Chair. Bradburn conceived the idea that they were tr[illegible] to hinder his speaking "and made some very offensive pe[illegible]al remarks, alluding to them

Disapproves of sectarianism. "Liberty Hall at Oakland is consecrated to Freedom."

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.72

«Salem, Ohio» The writer announces that she has written an article for the Liberty Bell on the other half of the sheet. "Our cause is making rapid progress in this state." One half of the Executive Committee of the Ohio (Anti-Slavery) Society have resigned and "now occupy the true Disunion ground." A letter from Abby Kelley contains 67 new subscribers and nearly $200 in pledges obtained in the lower part of the state. Abby Kelley and S. S. Foster have now gone to the meeting of the Indiana State Anti-Slavery Society. B. S. Jones and the writer hold meetings every week in the surrounding country, and attend to the Anti-Sla[illegible] Bugle between times. Thinks it would be highly inexped[illegible] to leave the state this winter.

To "Dear friend" «Anne Warren Weston»

«Salem (Ohio)» Having learned that the (Mass.) Committee had decided that they could not aid the Western (A.S.) Society or promise to sustain (Oliver) Johnson as editor of the Bugle, the writer inquires whether they could help by donating goods. "We must get up another Fair this summer," although fairs are not successful in the West and yield only a small sum; "yet that sum cannot be obtained from any other source, & we cannot get along without it." They are deeply in debt, but have resolved to continue the Bugle till the Annual Meeting in June.

«Salem, Ohio» Refers to a request, transmitted by Mr. (Parker) Pillsbury, in behalf of a fair to be held in Salem, Ohio, for contributions from the Boston Bazaar. The addressee had held out the prospect of such help, "supposing that the object of the Fair was to assist the State Society, auxilery «sic» to the American A.S. Society." The goods never arrived, but now they have learned that a box of Boston goods was sent to the Society in Cincinnati, "which has no connection whatever with old organised antislavery." The writer thinks that there was probably a mistake, and that the goods were intended for Salem instead of Cincin[illegible].

«Salem, O.» The writer hesitates to ask for contributions to her Anti-Slavery fair, but considers it necessary on account of the poor "pecuniary prospects of the Western Society." The subscription list of the Anti-Slavery Bugle is lower than it has been for some time. Says that excessive handling of the merchandise sent by the addressee tends to reduce its selling price. "We of the West feel that our field of labor is an important one, all who come from the East tell us so ..."
